About the Panel

Rapid globalization, digital transformation, and the expansion of international educational cooperation are accompanied by significant disparities in access to quality education, digital resources, modern technologies, and opportunities for academic mobility. These challenges are particularly significant for Asian countries, which are characterized by considerable socioeconomic, cultural, and regional diversity.Under these conditions, educational equality requires reconsideration: it involves not only ensuring formal equal access to education but also creating genuine opportunities for every learner to develop their potential regardless of their social, economic, or regional background. Examining this issue in the context of interaction between Asia and the global educational space makes it possible to identify effective mechanisms for developing more inclusive, equitable, and sustainable education systems that respond to the challenges of the twenty-first century.
